

BLOGTALKRADIO IN THE NEWS...

“BlogTalkRadio...a populist force in cyberspace.”

- Howard Kurtz, The Washington Post, Media Notes, March 24, 2008

BlogTalkRadio is “the media station of the future”

- Michael Harrison, publisher of Talkers Magazine, February 26, 2008

“BlogTalkRadio...has become the dominant player in the latest media trend, one that allows anyone with a Web connection to host a talk show on any topic at any time of day.”

- David Levine, Portfolio Magazine, February 26, 2008

“In just over a year and a half, BlogTalkRadio has become a leading player in the growing Internet Talk media trend, attracting a reported 80,000 listeners daily to its roster of some 40,000-plus shows.”

- Al Peterson, Air Check Today, February 26, 2008

“Offerings on the internet include not only a wealth of audio streaming commercial-free, but now even the likes of BlogTalkRadio—a site which essentially allows anyone to broadcast their own radio show for free over the internet.”

- Liz Gunnison, Portfolio Magazine February 28, 2008

“For those times when your best and brightest isn’t required in front of your PC or Mac, there’s talk radio Internet style at BlogTalkRadio.com, offering up about 400 shows a day on everything from the paranormal to who scored the most points in last night’s presidential primary debates.”

- Bob Walsh, WebWorkerDaily.com, January 23, 2008

“Shaun Daily, who hosts a radio show on www.blogtalkradio.com, was a huge fan of the show [Jericho]....he urged his listeners to ship nuts to CBS headquarters ... after receiving more than 40,000 pounds of peanuts from devoted and outraged fans, the network reversed course, picking up the post-apocalyptic drama for a seven-episode second season.”

- Amy Amatangelo, The Washington Post, February 10, 2008

“Unlikely stars have been born,” on BlogTalkRadio

- Howard Kurtz, The Washington Post, Media Notes, March 24, 2008